Guardians ad Litem are also called Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA). There are seven CASA programs in the state, one in each judicial district. Each local CASA program is a non-profit 501(c)(3) corporation governed by a Board of Directors. Funding for the programs consists of foundation grants, government grants, state funds and fundraising support from the community.

The Coeur d'Alene Indian Tribe also has a CASA program recognized by its sovereign nations court system. If you would like more information on Tribal programs, please contact the Coeur d'Alene Tribal Social Services office at (208) 686-6306, or visit their website [1].
